Final Word

- Öyster

So how was it?

Link's awesome, fantastic adventure was not as easy as the Manga shows it. Unsolvable puzzles, unbeatable enemies, an inexperienced child... Isn't experience shown in the experience itself rather than in experience points...?

My first experience in the field was full of things showing how new I was to it, but I finished it. This was because of all of the expectant readers. I thank you. I made this for my fans and fans of "The Legend of Zelda" at the same time, hoping I could make both happy at the same time.

Well this time I made a "yon-koma" for Nintendo Kids, with lots of help from "Keibu-niisan". Not to mention the Nintendo Kids Editing Department, and Nintendo Staff for checking the pictures. With the help of many I created a book about a game I love. I really am lucky. Thank you so much.

I'm sorry if I don't mention miss others who helped out or cheered me on. I'm always happy for your help. Always do your best.

It looks like Link's travels will be continuing for a little longer. Please stay and enjoy them with us.

Final Word

- The AnCo Team

It has been a pleasure to translate this comic for you all, and I hope that you enjoyed reading it as much as I did the first time.
The Wind Waker was a fantastic experience from start to finish and I highly recommend those of you who haven't played it get a copy and do so. It's already been four years since this comic was released in Japan and five years since the game made it's Japanese debut but it hasn't lost anything. The recent release of the Phantom Hourglass on DS has stirred up memories of this and hopefully brought more readers to our door.

Why do we do what we do? Simply for the love of it. We don't make any money from it, but it costs us hundreds of hours of our free time. The ones who really spend their lives on projects are the editors. I have an easy job, read Japanese and write English. Anyone can do it, and feel free to. But to have the skill to make it look like the original is much more difficult. Look at the cover page. Amazing. I will always be in awe of the staff we have.

That's enough from me now. May your journey be short and without peril.
KrySS

It has been real fun working on this great 4-koma. Our first 4-koma actually, and our first finished project!
Its been a great joy editing this manga, and I for one hope we get a PH version of this, we'll be sure to pick it up!
Many hours have been put into this, so I really hope you guys enjoy it as much as we did!

Farewell my friends! Kooloo-Limpah!~~
[Red]

Being that the only Zelda titles I have ever played were on the original NES none of this 4-koma really made sense to me. :) That did not take away from the enjoyment of the manga. I would have to say that this Manga we finished was a milestone for us... It shows that we can complete a project. :) Good job everyone!
Orion

Its been a lot of fun working on the Zelda manga. I can't say I did as much as other people did but I think I managed to contribute a little something. When you get the direct translation from Japanese to English its not always a perfect blend and sometimes the wordings need to be altered and the gags need to be tweaked. It was always good fun getting to a part in the proofing and laughing out loud before going back to work on it. I hope all the fans out there liked it as much as I did, hopefully we'll be able to do more things like this in future. Speak later, and may the triforce be with you.
